

ZVIKA KLEIN

Editor-in-Chief, The Jerusalem Post

Zvika Klein is editor-in-chief of The Jerusalem Post, where he writes the Editor's Notes column. He covers Israel, the Jewish world, antisemitism, and relations between Israel and Diaspora Jews, and has interviewed heads of state and senior officials. He gives keynotes, moderates on-stage conversations, and holds briefings for federations, synagogues, JCCs, institutes, and donor groups, in English and Hebrew.

Photo: Marc Israel Sellem/The Jerusalem Post

TOPICS

Israel and the Jewish world. Israeli politics, the war and its aftermath, and the arguments Israelis are having now, explained for audiences abroad.

US-Israel relations and American Jewish communities. Where Washington and Jerusalem line up, where they are drifting, and how American Jews read both governments.

Antisemitism and Jewish identity. What has changed for Jewish communities since October 7, 2023, on campuses, in city politics, and online, and how communities are responding.

Journalism and editorial decisions. How a newsroom decides what to cover in wartime, what it leaves out, and how a paper keeps the trust of readers who disagree with it.

FORMATS

Keynotes for galas, dinners, and campaign events

Scholar-in-residence Shabbat and weekends

Moderated conversations and panels

Briefings for missions in Jerusalem

Virtual briefings for boards and donor circles

Briefings on Israel after the October 2026 election

RECENT TALKS

October 8, 2026

And You Shall Tell: Nations and the Right to Their Own Story
National Conservatism Conference (NatCon) Jerusalem, Herzl
Institute

July 2026

Panel at the Contemporary Antisemitism conference
University of Haifa

July 2026

Moderator of four panels at the Jewish-Zionist Identity conference

World Zionist Organization, Department for Jewish-Zionist Identity

June 3, 2026

An inside look at the leaders, decisions, and social shifts reshaping Israel after October 7
Kesher Israel: The Georgetown Synagogue

June 2, 2026

Visionaries' Breakfast speaker and plenary panel on antisemitism
American Jewish Committee (AJC) Global Forum